HUMANITIES

Dear Friends and Supporters of Florida Humanities:

Floridians confronted unprecedented challenges in 2020. The pandemic led a list that included a tested economy, school disruptions, the realities of racism, and an emotionally charged presidential election with its unsettling aftermath. Most of us entered 2021 totally exhausted.

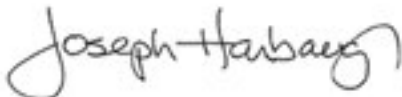

The humanities sector, unfortunately, was not spared from the tumult. Museums were forced to close, historical societies were silenced, many exciting programs were cancelled.

Luckily, Florida Humanities received funding through the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security ("CARES") Act passed in March 2020, allowing us to grant $875,000 in emergency relief funding to 100 humanities nonprofits across the state. In addition to supporting the continuation of hundreds of jobs, this effort sustained critical institutions that help us make sense of the turbulent moment in which we find ourselves.

In a year that tested the organization, Florida Humanities proudly produced a four-part series of conversations on "The Long History of Race Relations in Florida." We also brought another Smithsonian traveling exhibition, with the timely theme of democracy, to four communities. We financially underwrote the efforts of our partners through Community Project Grants to transform in-person programs to a virtual format to continue to serve their communities. Despite not receiving state funding for a second consecutive year, and the retirement of our esteemed Executive Director, Steve Seibert, Florida Humanities persevered.

This annual report provides additional detail of our activities in 2020. Your support and advocacy make all our efforts possible and worthwhile. We anticipate you share our optimism for Florida's incredibly bright future in the aftermath of a demanding year.

Sincerely,

Joseph Harbaugh
Chair of the Board
Florida Humanities

Our Mission

To preserve, promote and share the history, literature, culture and personal stories that offer Floridians a better understanding of themselves, their communities and their state.

"100 Faces of War"

Smithsonian
Institution

A traveling exhibition from the Smithsonian Institution, featuring 100 oil portraits of Americans who went to war in Iraq and Afghanistan, representing a cross section of home states and military branches. Every portrait includes a candid, first-hand account of war's lasting effect.

- $20,000 grants awarded to the following museums to host the exhibition in 2020:
Pensacola Museum of Art (Oct 2019 – Jan 2020)
Coral Springs Museum of Art (Oct – Dec 2020)

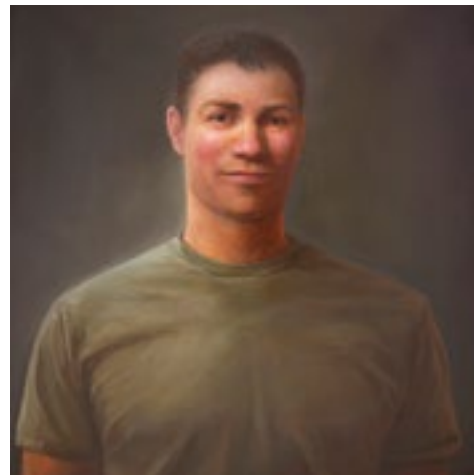

IMAGE COURTESY OF SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION

The "100 Faces of War" exhibit includes this portrait of Jeffrey Lucey. A newspaper story about Lucey's death by suicide after returning from the Iraq War inspired Matt Mitchell to begin painting and telling the stories of veterans.

Life, Liberty + Libraries

Libraries often serve as a community's hub for civic engagement. They are places where people come to vote, map their path to citizenship, learn from America's great thinkers, and raise their voices in community conversations. Florida Humanities and PBS Books proudly partnered in 2020 in this collaborative grant program, Life, Liberty + Libraries, to offer libraries and cultural organizations across Florida up to $2,500 in funding to purchase democracy and civics-themed books for circulation, utilize templated and high-quality promotional materials to further engage communities, and plan for humanities-rich public programming to accompany these new resources.
