

NATIONAL
FOR THE HUMANITIES

Overview:

Florida Humanities' Community Project Grants support the development and delivery of humanities-based learning experiences, known as public humanities programming, for Floridians to encourage thoughtful reflection, analysis, and consideration of important topics relevant to local communities, and the state writ large. At their core, these grants embody our mission to preserve, promote and share the history, literature, culture and personal stories that offer Floridians a better understanding of themselves, their communities and their state.

This funding opportunity aims to increase public participation in and access to the humanities by providing relevant, engaging, and meaningful humanities-based programming to all. Programming that fosters connections between different communities or demographic groups, promotes networking and collaboration between institutions and organizations, and links humanities-associated organizations with other community partners and sectors are encouraged.

All Community Project Grants Must:

- Be rooted in one or more disciplines of the humanities
- Involve humanities scholar(s) and other subject-area experts in all phases of the project
- Deepen public understanding of significant humanities questions and inspire constructive dialogue with the public
- Be free, or not cost prohibitive

What types of Programming do Community Project Grants Support?

Community Project Grants support an array of public humanities programming that encourage community engagement in and with the humanities. The mode of programming should be tailored to and appropriate for the subject matter, the applicant's goals, as well as reflective of the interests and needs of the intended audience(s), particularly underserved communities. Projects may be implemented using digital and virtual platforms as well as more traditional in-person methods, and neither is necessarily given more weight than the other in the evaluation of proposals.

Florida Humanities encourages innovation and experimentation with new approaches as well as use of time-tested formats such as:

- Community conversations, forums, and dialogues grounded in the humanities

- Interpretive exhibits (permanent or traveling, physical or digital) with significant humanities content and accompanying public programming
- Lectures, podcasts, and presentations grounded in the humanities
- Community-wide reads, or reading- or film-and-discussion programs; Book, film, and cultural festivals incorporating humanities activities
- Oral history projects, story-collection and -sharing programs, and other activities that produce and share knowledge products.
- Interpretive tours or other types of site- or place-based humanities programming

Community Project Grants Do Not Support:

- Organizational development or general operations (GOS)
- Research and planning without related public programming within the grant period
- Programming focused primarily on out-of-state audiences
- Capital improvements
- Creation of murals, sculptures or other artistic works, theatrical productions or performances that do not involve analysis/interpretation
- Creative or scholarly work by individuals including research, travel, or residencies
- Regranting, sub-awards, scholarships, prizes, or gifts
- Publication of books
- Activities and projects primarily intended to advance a specific policy goal or political agenda or to influence legislation (advocacy)
- Websites, or other materials, used to solely promote the organization
- Professional development programs, training, conferences, or activities geared for membership organizations, associations, or institutions
- Activities aimed primarily at fundraising, marketing, or institutional advancement

What Are the Humanities?

The Humanities are academic disciplines that study human culture, using methods that are primarily critical and have a significant historical perspective. Through the humanities, we learn how to think creatively and critically, to reason, and to ask questions, coming to a broader understanding of our shared human experience.

The term 'humanities' includes the study and interpretation of:

- Language, both modern and classical; linguistics; literature; history; jurisprudence; philosophy; archeology; comparative religion; ethics; the history, criticism and theory of the arts;
- Aspects of the social sciences which have humanistic content and employ humanistic methods;
- The application of the humanities to the human environment with particular attention to reflecting our diverse heritage, traditions, and history and to the relevance of the humanities to the current conditions of national life.

What is a Humanities Scholar?

While you should be involving subject area experts and community experts on your project, every project must involve at least one humanities scholar whose background is suited for the programming at hand. See below definitions to help determine who qualifies as a humanities scholar, or a subject area expert or a community expert.

- Humanities Scholars:

Every project is required to include scholars from humanities disciplines. Someone who has an advanced degree in a discipline of the humanities is generally considered a scholar. These individuals are important for providing context for a project and identifying relevant humanities themes and ideas.

- Subject Area Experts:

Projects may also include individuals who do not possess an advanced degree but nevertheless have a demonstrated record of working, teaching, and/or publishing in a humanities discipline. Such individuals will likely be recognized by others in the field as an area expert. These individuals may be important in developing major themes.

- Community Experts:

Some projects will find it necessary to include community members with special knowledge of cultural traditions or local history, such as Native American tribal elders, or local historians. Community experts might also possess specialized skills or specific information related to the locality or target audience, such as teachers familiar with the local K-12 curriculum requirements or members of local religious or civic organizations who are familiar with the history, needs, and concerns of a target audience. These individuals may be critical to focusing on the most appropriate theme ideas, developing effective methods of audience engagement, and building successful outreach strategies.

Where do I find a Humanities Scholar?

Scholars are often faculty members, librarians, museums professionals, or independent experts whose research and studies are firmly grounded in a humanities discipline. Before you submit your application, you and your scholar should, discuss the project and formulate ways to strengthen the humanities aspects, consider the involvement of other scholars to add diverse perspectives, and review the application to help clarify goals and ensure the project meets the requirements.
